NEWS OF THE DAY.

-Hon. Michael C. Kerr, one of the ablest and most influential Democratic members of Congress, and a colleague of Hon. D. W. Voorhees in a letter to a friend in Washington, says "Greeley is the man. It is inertable, accordy could stem the wave in that direction in Indiana lt was and is uncompromising and irresistible; all the proceedings of our conventions mean Greeley; the delegations to Baltimore mean Greeley. We must fight it out under that old white hat. What a Moses! Gods! Who, six or three months ago, would not have prononnced such an event impossible?"

-The courageous manifesto of the Duke of Montpensier, claiming the throne of Spain for Alphonso, son of the ex-Queen Isabella, is not likely to be followed by any tumult among Spaniards or any hostile demonstration whatever by the Orleanist duke himself. The young Alphonso, now fitteen years of age, has been bethrothed to Mercedes; daughter of the duke, who is three years his junior, and this manifesto of the duke is simply as if he were to say, "I want that throne for these children when Amadens gets tired of it, provided no other gentlemen desires to possess it." In the meantime, the ex-Queen holds mimic fourt in Paris, and the hopeful couple will see many changes in the affairs of Spain before they are old enough to be married.

-When Lord Dalling and Bulwer died lately he left no child to inherit his honore, and last autumn his brother, the novelist, lost his only grandson, the son of Owen Meredith; so that these eminent brothers seemed, so far as the ultimate transmission of their honors went, to have obtained them for nothing. However, a few weeks ugo, Lord Lytton's daughter-inlaw presented her husband, to whom a good deal of her father's ability seems to have descended, with a son and heir. Lord Lytton inherited his beautiful seat, Knehworth, from his mother, sole heiress and representative of the ancient Saxon family of Lytton. He is an admirable man ot business, and has considerably increased the value of his property by skliful management. His books, too, have -The crop of "frightful" disasters promises large this season. On Saturday there was a repetition of the Norwalk, Carr's Rock, New Hamburg and Revere disaster on the Grand Trunk Bailway of Canada, and about the same hour Chicago witnessed in the fatal burning of two members of an insurance patrol, in the discharge of their duty, a disaster which is almost overlooked among the horrors of the day. San Francisco, a few hours later, was startled by an explosion which wrecked six buildings, and on Sunday the imprisoned forces in the chemists' shop at New York shattered a building and wounded more than twenty persons, and at midday two train. on a Pennsylvania railroad rushed into each other, killing two persons and wounding several others. The next thing now in order is a steamboat explosion and great loss of life on some one of the Western rivers.

-The New York Tribune publishes statistics of forty trades now on strike in New York City and vicinity. These statistics are compiled from statements supplied principally by the employers, but a portion of the information has been given or verified by the workmen, who have, however, collected no statistics, and are unable to turnish anything more than estimates. The Tribune furnishes a table giving the figures in reference to each trade, and the totals are as follows: Men employed when shops are full, 83,938; men who struck, 60,050; men working eight hours, 36,050; men working at ten hours, 27,224; men still on strike, 11,493; loss to employers by the strike, $2,043,550, and loss of wages to men by strike, $1,674,950. Assuming the above figures to represent the losses incurred in strikes of an average duration of one year, it is calculated that the direct loss to the workingmen and their employers would amount to $41,814,000

If the strike were to continue for one year. -The Jewish Church, press and public in New York, primarily, and wherever else the story has run, have been scandalized by a marriage between a German Jew of wealth and good connections and his brother's widow, a union which, according to the Hebrew interpretation of Mosaic law, is incestuous and an unpardonable sin. The parties were both rich | had increased to the number of four hundred and very much in love with each other, but an obstacle, fixed generations ago by an Orthodox European Synod, stood in the way and threatened excommunication if they consummated their vows in wedlock. Several Rabbis refused to unite them, and only when the bridegroom equivocated and told Dr. Huebsch that he was a cousin of the bride's first husband would he solemnize their marriage. The Jewish Times refers to it as an incestuous marriage, and severely criticises Dr. Huebsch as guilty of wilful complicity with the parties, or criminal negligence.

-Tichborne, "the claimant," seems to be stirring up the provincials of England as much as he lately excited the Londoners with his celebrated trial. He is making an extensive to mong the towns and cities, exhibiting himself and collecting all the funds he can. The London News says: "He was lately received at southamption with music and cheering; he was serenaded by a brass band playing tunes appropriate to triumphal entries; and finally, having been deposited in a carriage drawn by four gray horses, jockeyed by riders in fancy costumes, he was conveyed in state to his hotel. We are told that the people filled the balconies and windows, and rowded for the privilege of touching hands with him. It appears that there is a regular claimant's livery, and his body-guard are decorated with rosettes. The claimant will koff declines, on behalf of Russia, being debe as practiced an orator as Mr. Onslow before he has concluded his wanderings, and he is bound always to speak as well as to exhibit himself to the friends of his cause. He has also a newspaper entirely devoted to his interests, called the Tichtorne Gazette."

-An opera composed by a real live Prince is the latest sensation in London. The com- planation of its intentions and a definition Prince Poniatowski, the grand-nephew of Stanislaus, the last Polish King, is now a sexagenarian whose life has been a queer mixture of music, diplomacy and exile. His early predilections were in the direction of art, and and when still quite young, he not only brought out an opera at Florence, but also sustained the tenor part in it himself. The next year he gave the cue to Offenbach by composing the quite celebrated and meritorigained the Prince no little fame and money in all the capitals of Europe. After writing five or six other operas in quick succession, he suddenly veered toward politics, and appeared at Paris, London and Brussels as minister plenipotentiary from Tuscany. He soon settled at Paris and became attached to the list of Louis Napoleon's adherents. The fall of the Empire extled him, and he now turns up in London in his old role of composer. "Gelmina" is the name of his present work, and Adelina Patti gives it adequate expression, and fills the house nightly; notwithstanding which it is almost unkind to say that the the opera is not regarded as musically a suc-But with a Prince to write the music cess. and a Diva to sing it, what more would the public have ?

The Registration of State Bonds.

"We have at hand the complaint of 'A Constant Reader' couching the case of the South Carolina bonds. As far as we can ascertain, the Legislature, believing that spurious bonds had been issued and were in the market, passed an act limiting the recognition of the State to such bonds as should be registered at the office of the Commercial Warehouse Company in this city. So lar the action of the State may have been very proper; but the law not only failed to make any provision for the payment to this company of the expenses of such legislation, but, if we understand the case rightly, expressly stipulated that such registration should be entirely at the expense of the public creditors, and should cost the State nothing. An agreement was arranged between the committee of the Stock Exchange and the Commercial Warehove com-pany to carry this registration into effect, each bondholder being Joseph is share of the cost, which apposed would be the cost, whichabout op quarter of one per cent. After this cement had been signed the Commercial Warehouse Company expressed some misgivings in relation to it, lest it should involve that institution in some pecuniary liability if any spurious bonds were registered, and a modification of the agreement was requested. According to the representations of the officers of the company, the Stock Exchange declined to vary the terms of the agreement, and they accordingly put the rate up to one per cent. on the par value of the bonds, which they charge every bondholder who presents bis voucher for registration. We regard this as an exhorbitant charge, and the plea for it as wholly unsatisfactory to the public."

-The law referred to (Act of March 13, 1872,) does not make any provision for the expense of registering the bonds, but it does not provide, expressly or by implication, that the registration shall be at the expense of the public creditors. The law declares the Commercial Warehouse Company, in the City of New York, and the Carolina National Bank, in the City of Columbia, South Carolina, "to be authorized places for the regis-"tering of the bonds, coupons or stocks" of the State, and "they are authorized . .

" to immediately advértise . . to "the holders of all the bonds, coupons or "stock of the State of South Carolina the "necessity of registering their bonds, cou-"pons or stocks at one of the above author-'ized places of registry." The law also sets forth the way in which the registration shall be conducted, and makes it "the duty" of the Warehouse Company and of the Carolina National Bank to publish "quarterly "statements" of the amount of bonds, coupons or stocks registered by thec. In view of these provisions, it is clear to our mind that the expense of registration was intended to be borne by the State, which for its own convenience and for its own safety, as much as for the protection of the public, designated the places of registration, and requires that no interest shall be paid on any bonds or stocks until so registered. There is no instification whatever for the charge which the Warehouse Company have seen fit to

The Jews in Roumania.

The persecution of the Jews in the Roumanian principalities is a disgrace to the civilization of the age. The countries along the shores of the Danube have for centuries made that region a favorite Jewish centre. The result of the Crimean war was supposed to be a gain to the Jews. The treaty of 1856, and the subsequent additional treaty signed by the convention of 1858, made full provision for the religious liberty of all the European subjects of the Sultan. Article 46 of the convention of 1858 guarantees equal liberty to all Christian creeds, with the privilege of legislative extension to all other rites. In 1870, such were the encouragements given in Roumania, the Israelites thousand, and the synagogues at the same date numbered one hundred and seventy six. It is said that in France, about that period, the Jews did not exceed in number one hundred and sixty thousand, and that in the three kingdoms of England, Scotland and Ireland there were not over forty-five thousand of that unmixed race. In 1858, Moldavia and Wallachia were united under the common name of Roumania, and the rapid increase of the Jewish population in the united principalities, with their activity and growing prosperity, became a source of trouble to the government of Prince Charles. The trouble, as all the world knows, has continued until this day. It is said that in no part of the world are the children of Israel so persecuted as they have been in Roumania. The British government and our own have remonstrated in regard to it, and now the British and Italian governments have proposed a conference of the great powers on the subject, and to debate also the propriety of a direct allied pressure on the Roumanian government to compel measures for the executive repression of the barbarous outburst against the Jews in that country. Prince Gortchaterred by apprehensions that the proposition will serve only to excite an agitation of the dreaded Eastern question. He agrees,

however, that the powers more immediately interested shall address a joint note to the

Roumanian government der unding an ex-

poser is not unknown to fame in various ways. | of the guarantees which Prince Charles can offer for the protection of the Jews in the future, and thus awaken the Bucharest executive to a sense of its official responsibilities. Should the Roumanian reply prove unsatisfactory to the consignatories of the note, the Emperor of Russia would propose a settlement of the difficulty on the basis of the treaty of 1858. The Prussian government is said to take the same ground as ous opera-bouffe, "Don Desiderio," which Russia. It is to be hoped, in the interests of humanity and civilization, that such a pressure will be brought to bear upon Roumania as will prevent the recurrence of barbarities.

Labor vs. Capital.

Discussing in the most dispassionate and able manner the labor question, the New York Bulletin truly says that the workingmen in that city are organizing idleness as a remedy for their grievances, and using all their resources to prevent themselves and others from working. The result of all this may be summed up in the following terse language: "The whole issue resolves itself into the question whether Capital shall starve out Labor or shall Labor drive out Capital? In either case the suffering and loss to New York must be very great; but whether the loss shall be permanent depends on the result. If the piano, furniture, printing, sewing machine, iron and the shipbuilding trades (or what remains of the latter) shall be driven from New York, the workmen will have only a barren victory. Our most flourishing trades will have been banished and destroyed, and those that remain will only be on a limited scale and to supply immediate local-wants." It is to be remembered that nothing can so readily take to itself wings and fly away as Capital. It can be easily transferred, much more so than Labor; and when a trade has been once driven from a locality experience shows that it can never be regained.

A REPRESENTATIVE LIFE OF HORACE GREELEY. With an Introduction by L. W. Reavis. New York: G. W. Carleton & Co. 1872. Cloth. Pp. 579. Price $2.

It is very well understood that there are tens of thousands of Southerners who do not care to read any life of Mr. Greeley which goes back beyond the end of the war. There are many more, equally sincere, who are eager to read the strange history of the poor farmer's boy, who promises to be the next President of the American Union. The firstclass need only peruse the bright pages, beginning the day after the surrender of Lee, where Mr. Greeley, in the midst of a whirl of fapatic hate, preaches magnanimity and peace. These articles and speeches were not produced under the excitement of a party nomination, and for the furtherance of personal ambition. Far from this, they were made when to hold such sentiments was to expose oneself to a storm of obloquy and reproach. Mr. Greeley kept the even tenor of his way; the same in 1865 as in 1872; the same when pleading for reunion and peace as when bidding the thieving carpet-baggers go back home.

The present life of Mr. Greeley is not expected to take high rank as a literary work; but, by narrative and copious extracts from his writings and speeches, it delineates the character of the man, shows his energy and sincerity, his unflinching firmness in advocating the doctrine to which he was wedded, and the wonderful victory which he has achieved over the circumstances and the preto understand Mr. Greeley, and, even when his opinions and ideas are most different from our own, his frankness and steady integrity still compel respect. For sale at Holmes's Book House.
